Appomattox Students Denied Constitutional Rights

Editor to The Times-Virginian:

As a concerned senior at Appomattox County High School, I have been reading the articles printed in the paper about our school color situation. A group of student council members met with the principal, Mr. Frank Chuchek, to decide the school colors to be voted on. In this meeting, the former students of Carver-Price H. S. told the former students of Appomattox High School that they could not have the color blue (blue and white was the combination of A. H. S.) mentioned in any of the color combinations to be voted on. Yet, one of the accepted color combinations was scarlet red and gold (maroon and gold were the CP school colors). This was the first injustice the former A.H.S. students had to put up with. Later on, the former C-P students said they had been promised beforehand (by whom we do not know) that blue would not be one of our colors.

The morning of the election, the SCA co-president announced on the intercom to all ACHS students that write-in votes would not count, and would be labelled as mis-marked ballots. One of our basic democratic rights of the vote was denied us right there—we could not vote for what we wanted. The former A.H.S. constitution gave us the right to vote as we wished, but the excuse has been made that we are a new school, and we do not have a constitution which gives us that right. Just the fact that the government of the United States gives us that right should be enough to justify the validity of the write-in votes. The students of ACHS voted for what they wanted—blue and white. Not to retain ties with the old school, but because we liked those colors. Also, we have gotten new uniforms within the past two years in various sports which were colored blue and white, and if the colors were to be changed, we would be put to great expense in just trying to buy new outfits for cheerleaders, football players, basketball players, etc. Appomattox is not a rich county, and there are more essential things we need the money for in the field of education.

Also, some of the former students of C-PHS wanted the blue and white combination, and when we were told we could not write-in votes, they were denying the right of those students as well as those of AHS. Since ACHS is a brand new school, it has NEVER HAD ANY SCHOOL COLORS, so why isn't blue and white a new combination just as well as scarlet red and gold, or black and gold, or green and white? If we ever get around to a vote on a school nickname, wouldn't Rebels or Panthers be a brand new names for the brand new school?

This issue has become one not just of disagreement on school colors, but the denial of basic democratic rights. In governmental elections, write-in votes MUST BE COUNTED, because this is a democracy and we voice our opinions through the vote. The majority rules—no matter whether the item with plurality was already on the ballot or was written in. In ACHS's case, though, anyone who has heard of our situation has seen that it doesn't matter what the majority of the students want, but of what a few adults in leadership want. We, the students, do not know who are behind the results of the election, but we do know that our vote, an expression of our opinion has been totally disregarded: that an election was held to make it seem as if we were under democratic rule, but this has been changed around to suit some people. Our vote doesn't count—we have been under a dictatorship—even though we expressed our desire, a few people don't want us to have blue and white, so they think they can just dismiss our opinion.

If we allow our rights to be taken away from us so easily, what will come next? We, the students, have enough to worry about in things to do with education, such as classes being so crowded (ACHS has at least about 50 more people now than when the school building was AHS), and the trouble with getting to classes with additional students is increased. We are all trying very hard to make the integration work, but it is made more difficult when democratic rights are denied ALL STUDENTS OF ACHS, BLACK AND WHITE.

We just wish to remain democratic—in ALL phases of school life, not just in school colors.

The Pastor Speaks

Challenge For Youth
"God's Will"
Romans 12:1-2

An important question for many christian young people today is, "What is God's will for my life?" No one should want to be out of God's will and miss what God has planned for him. It is a tragic thought to go through life, realize when it is too late, you missed God's will.

There are some guidelines to help you follow the path God would want for you. First, you must desire God's will for your life. It is difficult to fight what you want to do, but your own will must be separated from God's will. You must put aside your own feelings and desires.

Jesus knew he must die on a cross. He knew the pain and agony he would experience, yet He desired God's will. In Matt. 26:39, Jesus said, "... not as I will, but as thou will." He desired God's will for His life.

Second, you must determine God's will. Satan will attempt to side-track you in every possible way. He will use other people to help you change your mind. Boy friends and girl friends will be used to send one another in a different direction than God desires. It is interesting to observe how young people will receive direction concerning God's will, meet a new boy friend or girl friend, and suddenly change their direction, rationalizing that it is God's will.

Adults and even parents will cause one to be sidetracked. I have heard parents say to a young person, "That's not God's will for you." What they often mean is, "This my will for you."

Others can be helpful in advising you concerning God's will, but be sure of their motivation. Determine God's will for your life and then don't vary from it.

Third, you must defend God's will. Jesus said in John 4:34, "... my meat is to do the will of Him that sent me, and to finish His work." That burning desire and determination will help you to defend God's will in your life. When the fight gets rough and you begin to experience other influences, defend God's will. Defend the will of Him that sent you, and God will give you all you need to finish His work. Be on the defence for outside, foreign influences that you know will cause you to vary.

Missing God's will can cause heartache and frustration for a young person. Knowing God's will can produce peace and happiness. Desire, determine and defend God's will and enjoy peace and meaning in your life. Remember: The non-christian reads your life and not his Bible.

SIGNS AND WONDERS

Lesson for April 12, 1970

Background Scripture: Acts 2; 43 through 6:7.
Devotional Reading: Hebrews 11: 32 through 12:2.

Peter and John got into serious difficulty because they healed a man. What the authorities were concerned with was not so much that a man who had been lame was now healed of his infirmity, but that a remarkable sign had been performed in the name of Jesus. Men were won to the Good News of Jesus Christ, not only by powerful testimony, but also by works in which the power of God was revealed.

Signs And Wonders Today

Many Christians assume that these God-given "signs and wonders" ceased with the close of the New Testament age. But many of the early Church Fathers speak of the healing ministry of the early church. St. Francis of Assisi practiced healing through prayer and the laying on of hands. Martin Luther spoke of it in his letters to Lutheran pastors and himself was instrumental in the healing of his lieutenant, Philip Melanchton. Other reformers such as John Wesley and George Fox both practiced and wrote of it.

And today? Someone has recently said: "Cancer is being healed today through prayer. There are too many cases of the healing of cancer through prayer to explain away by coincidence or medicinals." These were not the words of a preacher, evangelist, or "faith healer," but a medical doctor, Alan B. King, M.D., of Canton, Ohio. A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine and a member of the American Medical Association and American Academy of Ophthalmology, Dr. King is one of a considerable number of physicians and physical scientists who are greatly interested in the rise of the church's healing ministry today.

The Age Is Not Over

Speaking to a group of clergymen in the historic St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, Dr. King told of weekly healing services conducted in his church, Christ Presbyterian Church, Canton, during which prayers are offered for the sick of mind, body and spirit and the New Testament practice of the laying-on-of-hands is carried on. "The age of miracles is not over," said Dr. King.

For one thing, many of us have seen too many examples of God's healing power to relegate prayer to disregard this great force. For another, spiritual healing is not so "unscientific" as many people suppose. For many of us, not only is our God too small, but our world of science is also too narrow. We are finding once again the truth enunciated by St. Augustine: "Miracles do not happen in contradiction to nature, but only in contradiction to that which is known to us of nature." All healing takes place according to law, although we may not be familiar with the laws by which spiritual healing takes place, just as the laws of aero dynamics have always existed but until recently have been unknown.

Wonder And Amazement

Some of the principles of spiritual healing are evident in Acts 3. (1) It involves concentration of attention and effort. Peter said to the man, "Look at us." How often the power of prayer as getting God's attention; in reality it is a matter of giving him our attention so that he can do what he may do with us as he desires. (2) It involves the expectation that we will receive something. Unless we truly expect something to happen, we keep closed the door through which the power of God must enter. (3) It involves the power of the living Lord. Peter said: "... in the name of Jesus of Nazareth, walk." (4) It often involves the touch of a human hand as a channel to God's power. Peter reached down and took the man by the hand "and raised him up." (5) It may provide fresh evidence of the power of God at work in the world today. Those who saw what happened "were filled with wonder and amazement."

The ministry of healing is a means by which the signs and wonders of God are still being performed in our world today.

For three months we've been a deficit rainfall. If the spring showers of recent days continue we should soon be able to tell whether the weather does break the state's lot of catching up to do. Meanwhile weather has mini-mized the spreading of lime and fertilizer.

J. C. Caldwell, Jr. will have the county's largest acreage of fescue for weevil - resistance. Four acres of "Weevil-grass" and 7 acre of "Team" have been seeded. He'll be using a 5 percent granular herbicide, called Eptam, to control grass.

We look forward to watching the seeding develop.

Although Bradford tells me that he has had a new corn planter; and that he selected one that is designed for either sod-planting or conventional planting.

Local planting corn, soybeans, and grain sorghum is growing. We look forward to seeing a large portion of our corn crop harvested as killed sod within the past. I am convinced that it's the only way corn can be economically produced on many Piedmont Virginia soils.

Chuck Marshall has had fescue poisoning confirmed in his cow herd. This is most unfortunate but little is known about cure or treatment.

This is the first confirmed case of fescue poisoning in Appomattox County even though there have been fescue for 25 years. Researchers have been unable to trigger the mechanism that causes the condition. Therefore, very little research has been possible.

Actually there is disagreement as to the causative agent. Some researchers say that it is a fungus, while others say it is a alkaloid complex.

Of the 23 adult animals in the herd, about a dozen have been affected in some manner, with a few lost their tails above the switch, lameness was, as usual, the first indication of trouble. Hopefully the lameness will begin to disappear and the worst is over.

Extension forage specialist at the University of Kentucky says that he has never observed fescue poisoning when clover is present. Poisoning occurs after a drough or in the fall of the year.

Why do cattle become poisoned on some farms and not others? Will it reoccur next year? Are there management practices that could be used to prevent poisoning? Is it correct that old stands are more likely to induce poisoning than young stands? Can animals be affected with cured fescue hay?

These and numerous other questions need answers. We have only opinions on which to base recommendations.

Earlier this year there was an outbreak in Nottoway County. Cattle on this farm lost their hooves and not their tails. Why? Another mystery amid the many unanswered questions about fescue poisoning.
